LIEUT. SAMUEL PARK WEIR.

And must it be that we no more shall meet,
Again to wander on the lonely shore,
Pressing the Ocean gems beneath our feet,
And listening to the music of its roar ?
Oh ! can it be those happy days are o'er,
And through the vista of all coming years
Shall memory link thee with the field of gore,
And with its victims on their bloody biers,
Shall the fond heart's relief be but a flood of tears ?

No ! I still see thee, as I saw thee then,
Beside the margin of the mighty deep,
At dewy morn, at noon, at even-tide.
